New Definitions Feature on Quickscribe

In legislation, the definition of a word or term is often buried within the law itself and not necessarily listed in the designated glossary or definitions section. To complicate matters further, there may be different definitions of the same term within a law, depending on the context and section it is applied.

To assist you, Quickscribe includes a dedicated "Definitions" page that is accessible via the top navigation bar that appears when you open any law on Quickscribe. This page not only displays all the various definitions throughout a law in one convenient location, but also now includes the corresponding sections from which the definitions are pulled.

Another advantage of this feature is that the Definitions page opens in a separate window, allowing you to maintain your place in the document.

We hope that this new Definitions feature will make your legal research easier.

New Rules for Housing Needs Reports and OCPs, and Amenity Cost Charges (Now in Force)

On June 18, provisions of 2023 Bill 44, c. 45, the Housing Statutes (Residential Development) Amendment Act, 2023, were brought into force by B.C. Reg. 152/2024. The amendments to the Local Government Act and Vancouver Charter require official community plans to consider the most recent housing needs report and the anticipated housing needs over a period of at least 20 years. The Housing Needs Report Regulation, B.C. Reg. 90/2019, and Vancouver Housing Needs Report Regulation, B.C. Reg. 91/2019, were also updated with the method for calculating the housing needed. An interim housing needs report must be completed by January 1, 2025, and official community plans and zoning bylaws must be updated by December 31, 2025. Guidance and resources for housing needs reports can be found on the BC government website. Other recent changes related to the new housing initiatives include the introduction of Prescribed Classes of Affordable Housing \(Local Government Act\) Regulation, B.C. Reg. 156/2024, and Prescribed Classes of Affordable Housing \(Vancouver Charter\) Regulation, B.C. Reg. 157/2024, effective on June 19. These regulations list the classes of affordable housing that are exempt from paying amenity cost charges in relation to a new development. June 30 Changes to Bylaws for Transit-Oriented Areas and SSMUH Requirements (Now in Force)

As of June 30, provisions of Bill 47, the Housing Statutes (Transit-Oriented Areas) Amendment Act, 2023, are in force, requiring local governments to pass a bylaw to designate transit-oriented areas. These bylaws must include a map or plan or other graphic material and consider the guidelines under section 585.5 of the Local Government Act, such as the Provincial Policy Manual: Transit-Oriented Areas. June 30 is also the deadline for local governments to update their zoning bylaws to accommodate small-scale, multi-unit housing requirements as set out in section 481.3 of the LGA, unless an exemption or extension applies, and the deadline to remove minimum residential-parking requirements under section 525.

Bill 16 – Part One: An Overview of Tenant Protections

Bill 16 – 2024: Housing Statutes Amendment Act, 2024, (“Bill 16”), received royal assent on April 25, 2024. Bill 16 follows a series of other bills introduced in the fall of 2023 (Bills 44, 46, and 47), which contain provisions generally designed to increase housing supply by removing zoning constraints, especially on land within existing settled areas and close to transit, and provide new and revised tools for local governments to finance growth. Bill 16 introduces further changes to the Local Government Act, Vancouver Charter, and Community Charter, introducing new authority for tenant protection, inclusionary zoning, and transportation demand management bylaws, and modifying existing authority for density bonus (“benefits”) zoning and the imposition of works and services requirements in connection with the subdivision and development of land. This article, is the first of a three-part series (all conveniently contained in this YA Newsletter) exploring the contents of Bill 16. Part one reviews the new tenant protection powers. Part two looks at density bonusing and inclusionary zoning. Part three addresses new and improved works and services authority, as well as transportation demand management measures. Permit Pitfalls: Lessons for Local Governments from Vanderhaeghe

In the recent decision of Sunshine Coast (Regional District) v. Vanderhaeghe, 2024 BCCA 169 (“Vanderhaeghe”), a development permit issued based on a mistaken interpretation of a non-conforming use provision of the Local Government Act (the “LGA”) implicitly granted a homeowner a development variance permit.

Background

Ms. Vanderhaeghe wanted to replace her old waterfront cottage (the “Old Cottage”) with a new three-storey building (the “New Dwelling”). The Old Cottage was a lawful non-conforming building located within the setback area from the lake under the Regional District’s zoning bylaw. The New Dwelling would be roughly the same size and maintain the same footprint as the Old Cottage. Relying upon s. 529 of the LGA, the District issued a demolition permit for the Old Cottage and a development permit and building permit for the New Dwelling.

Saanich Votes to Allow Secondary Suites in Rural Areas

Saanich council has voted to legalize secondary suites in homes in rural areas of the municipality, in what the mayor called a “somewhat begrudging” decision after the province forced its hand. Saanich Mayor Dean Murdock said it wasn’t his or all of council’s first choice – the first major dispute between the province and Saanich over BC’s efforts to increase housing across the province. Murdock said he’s worried the part of the municipality outside the Urban Containment Boundary does not have the infrastructure, such as access to transit and city septic or water lines, to service the additional residents. However, he said if council refused, it could have allowed the province to set its own rules, unilaterally deciding the number of secondary suites and permitting additional garden suites on rural lots. 'What If We Say No?': Burnaby Defies BC's Transit-oriented Housing Laws

New provincial legislation requires BC cities to allow taller buildings near transit hubs by June 30. Burnaby won’t comply. In its latest protest against BC’s new housing legislation, Burnaby has delayed the bylaw required by the province to allow taller heights near SkyTrain stations. Instead of approving three of four major approvals needed at a council meeting June 24, Mayor Mike Hurley formally tabled the bylaw for a minimum of 90 days. There was no discussion around the council table, and the motion was approved unanimously. Read the full article by Lauren Vanderdeen with Burnabynow.

(Es)cheating Has Consequences: Escheat and Its Implications for Local Governments

One somewhat arcane property law concept that can be relevant to local governments from time to time is the law of escheat.

While the Latin roots of the word, and its roots in the allodial title system in England after the Norman Conquest, are beyond the scope of this newsletter article, for our purposes it is sufficient to note that an escheat is the reversion of property to the government. An escheat may occur, for example, when an individual dies without lawful heirs, or when a company or society is dissolved. The result of an escheat may therefore be that the government takes a sort of ownership of land or other assets owned by the individual at the time of death or other legal entity at the time the entity is dissolved. The British Columbia Escheat Act deals with certain rights and powers of the government relating to escheats. Some of these powers were considered in the Court of Appeal's recent decision in Mowatt v. British Columbia (Attorney General), 2024 BCCA 157 ("Mowatt"). Mostertman v Abbotsford (City): Residents Seek Class Action over City of Abbotsford's Handling of Sumas Flood

In November 2021, the Sumas Prairie in Abbotsford experienced severe flooding, which led to significant damage and displacement. The plaintiffs have applied to certify this action as a class proceeding, alleging negligence and nuisance against the City of Abbotsford. The plaintiffs claim that the magnitude of the flooding resulted from Abbotsford's failure to close the flood gates at the Barrowtown Pump Station in a timely manner. The Sumas Prairie, a floodplain in Abbotsford, is continually drained by the Pump Station, operated and maintained by Abbotsford. Regardless of precipitation, without the Pump Station's operation, the Prairie would be submerged within two to three days. The Pump Station features four flood gates designed to regulate water flow from the Fraser, Sumas, and Vedder rivers. Under normal conditions, the Sumas River flows through the open flood gates, merging with the Vedder River, and ultimately into the Fraser River. However, during reverse flow conditions, when the Fraser River's water level is higher than the Sumas River, leaving the flood gates open can result in back flooding. This can flood the Outer Sumas Prairie and, if severe, the Inner Sumas Prairie. The operating procedures mandate that the flood gates be closed when the Fraser River's water level reaches 3.0 meters. The CRA's Proposed New Audit Powers: More Discretion, More Time to Reassess, Less Judicial Oversight

Budget 2024 introduced several proposals designed to give the Canada Revenue Agency ("CRA") additional powers to obtain information and enhance compliance with information requirements. The proposed measures would apply to information requests under the Income Tax Act, the Excise Tax Act and certain other tax statutes. The stated intent of the proposed amendments is to "enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of tax audit and facilitate the collection of tax revenues on a timelier basis." However, the proposed changes really have the effect of significantly tilting the playing field in favor of the CRA when it comes to collecting information from taxpayers, and threatens to limit reasonable protections that taxpayers currently have to withhold the production of privileged and confidential information. This article will discuss three major changes: (i) a new penalty for compliance orders; (ii) a notice of non-compliance; and (iii) the ability to question under oath or affirmation. Procedural Barriers to Justice in Tax Disputes

The Tax Court of Canada (the "Tax Court") in Anderson v. The King, 2024 TCC 72 ("Anderson"), an informal procedure case, recently found that it could not extend the time for a taxpayer to file an objection, that it could not hear an appeal following a late objection, and that it did not have jurisdiction to hear an appeal of the Minister's refusal to accept a T1 Adjustment request. The decision emphasizes the importance of taking the correct procedural steps when advancing a tax dispute, and raises questions respecting what the Tax Court and Parliament can do to reduce procedural barriers to justice in tax disputes. Canada's Clean Economy Tax Credits Receive Royal Assent

In order to encourage early adoption of clean technologies across Canada, and in response to the significant clean-technology incentives promulgated under the U.S. Inflation Reduction Act, the Federal Government of Canada introduced the following refundable, clean economy investment tax credits ("ITCs") over the course of Budgets 2022 to 2024:

1. Clean Technology ("Clean Tech") ITC
2. Carbon Capture, Utilization and Storage ("CCUS") ITC
3. Clean Hydrogen ("CH") ITC
4. Clean Technology Manufacturing ("CTM") ITC
5. Clean Electricity ITC

On Thursday, June 20, 2024, the enabling legislation for the first four of the above five ITCs (Bill C-59 and Bill C-69) received royal assent - an important legislative step toward the enactment of legislation which will have wide ranging impact across many key Canadian industry verticals. The following provides a high-level summary of these four ITCs. Our bulletins for Budget 2022, Budget 2023, Fall Economic Statement 2023 and Budget 2024 contain details regarding the five clean economy ITCs. Clearing the Air: Canada Adopts New Greenwashing Laws under the Competition Act

New amendments to the Competition Act in Canada are now in force via Bill C-59 after receiving royal assent on June 20, 2024. Many of these amendments target "greenwashing" – a common shorthand for misleading environmental claims about products or business practices. In Canada, greenwashing has been regulated primarily as a form of deceptive marketing, recognized as anti-competitive conduct. As a result, regulatory oversight over greenwashing has come under the purview of Competition Bureau Canada (the "Competition Bureau"). The new amendments to the Competition Act introduce a more targeted prohibition against greenwashing, and expand the means of enforcement as follows:

First, Bill C-59 introduces explicit prohibitions against deceptive environmental claims, requiring that such claims be based on "adequate and proper tests" or "internationally recognized methodologies." While this clarifies that environmental claims must be supported by "adequate and proper" testing, there continues to be some ambiguity with respect to these standards, although the Competition Bureau is actively monitoring parallel guidance in the United States and the European Union, where new directives and updates are also underway to standardize environmental claims. Seven Lessons Learned after Year One of Supply Chain Reporting in Canada

For many businesses operating in Canada, May 31, 2024 marked the first annual deadline for filing annual reports under Canada's Fighting Against Forced Labour and Child Labour in Supply Chains Act, formerly known as Bill S-211 or the Modern Slavery Act (the Act). As we have previously discussed, the Act casts a wide net with respect to the businesses that are subject to its reporting obligations, which requires disclosure of the steps taken during the previous financial year to reduce the risk of forced labour or child labour in the business' supply chain. Given the short timeline between implementation of the Act and the reporting deadline, reporting entities and government institutions were required to move quickly to prepare their reports, often in the face of unclear and/or changing guidance. Now that the dust has settled, it is important to consider the takeaways and next steps to affect a seamless reporting period next year. Read the full article by Laura Levine, [Benedict S. Now It's Here: What to Do About the New Capital Gains Tax

Changes to the capital gains tax in Canada have created ripples across the corporate landscape. As a business owner or investor, it's crucial to understand how this tax impacts you, your business and your investments. It's time we discuss, from a Canadian tax perspective, what steps you can take to navigate these changes effectively.

Understanding the New Capital Gains Tax

Capital gains tax is levied on the profit realized from the sale of assets or investments. The new rules, purportedly introduced (at least in part) to increase government revenue, have significant implications for corporations, investors, and high-net-worth individuals. The tax rate changes and adjustments in exemptions can affect your financial planning and investment strategies.

Green Light for Exempt Market Dealers to Participate in Public Offerings

On June 20, 2024, the securities regulatory authorities in Alberta, British Columbia, Nova Scotia, Ontario, Québec, and Saskatchewan (the "participating jurisdictions") published local blanket orders (collectively, the "Blanket Orders") pursuant to which exempt market dealers ("EMDs") will be permitted to participate in offerings under a prospectus as members of selling groups. The Blanket Orders, which are substantively harmonized across the participating jurisdictions, became effective June 20, 2024 and are to remain in effect until December 20, 2025. The time-limited Blanket Orders are intended to support capital-raising by early-stage businesses by providing EMDs with an ability to participate in public offerings. EMDs play an important role in assisting issuers raise capital through private placement offerings without the use of a prospectus. Until now, EMDs have not been able to participate in prospectus offerings. The Blanket Orders will enable EMDs to continue to support issuers in their capital raising efforts should they pursue prospectus offerings and are expected to provide more capital-raising opportunities for Canadian small businesses. Harmony at Last? Amendments to Canada's Impact Assessment

Act Seek to Harmonize Federal and Provincial Assessments

The Impact Assessment Act ("IAA") has been amended with implications for the assessment and approval of major energy, infrastructure and mining projects going forward. The federal government unveiled amendments to the IAA in the Budget Implementation Act, 2024, No. 1 ("Bill C-69"), which received royal assent on June 20, 2024.

The amendments are intended to ensure the IAA is more efficient and constitutionally sound. In a landmark opinion [2023 SCC 23] issued on October 13, 2023, the Supreme Court of Canada found core components of the IAA to be unconstitutional, including the "screening decision" (whether a federal impact assessment is required), and the "public interest decision" (where a decision is made to allow a project to proceed or not). Changes to Combustible Dust: New Regulations Coming for B.C. Industries

In British Columbia's forestry sector, there has been no year in recent history filled with more preventable tragedies than 2012. In January of 2012, the Babine Forest Products sawmill in Burns Lake suffered an explosion that resulted in the deaths of two workers while injuring 20 others. A few months later in April 2012, about a 2.5-hour drive from Burns Lake in B.C.'s Northern Interior, the Lakeland Mills sawmill in Prince George exploded, killing another two workers and injuring 22 more people. The investigations into these explosions found one culprit responsible: combustible dust. Since that time, regulations have been tightened to ensure better management of combustible dust throughout the province.

B.C.'s management of combustible dust was the topic of the closing keynote presentation for the 2024 Global Dust Safety Conference, which took place earlier this year. The presentation, "Upcoming release process for the proposed British Columbia regulations for combustible dust. Why they are needed and what it means for industries in B.C.," was presented by Rodney Scollard, senior policy and legal advisor, and Mike Tasker, CRSP occupational safety officer with WorkSafeBC. New Interior Appraisal Manual Posted

The new Interior Appraisal Manual came into effect on July 1, 2024, with a cost base of 2022. Some of the changes include:

- adding new definitions, "Blown down" and "Logical Unit";
- updating the estimated winning bid equation;
- updating table values in Tables 3-1 to 3-3, 4-1, 4-3 to 4-8, 6-6 and 6-8;
- adding a new section on portable platforms;
- updating values for equipment and labour rates; and
- updating the Enhanced Silviculture Regimes table.

Quickscribe will publish the new version of the manual to our site within the next few days.

Expanding the Scope of Cost-Recovery Actions under BC's Environmental Management Act

A recent decision of the BC Supreme Court has opened the door for more creative ways for parties to recover remediation costs pursuant to the cost-recovery mechanism in BC's Environmental Management Act. The decision of Cordy Environmental Inc. v. Obsidian Energy Ltd., 2023 BCSC 1198, which is currently under appeal, allows contractors to recover the cost of unpaid remediation work against former owners or operators of contaminated sites.

This decision significantly expands the liability of former owners, operators and other responsible persons, who may soon find themselves footing the bill for unpaid invoices they had no part in authorizing. CFIA Expands Emerald Ash Borer Regulation in B.C.

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA) has updated its regulated areas for emerald ash borer (EAB – Agrilus planipennis) to include an area in British Columbia, in an effort to slow the insect's spread.

The regulated area in British Columbia includes the City of Vancouver, the University of British Columbia (UBC) campus and the University Endowment Lands (UEL). This is the first expansion of the EAB regulated area in British Columbia. Read the article from Canadian Forest Industries (paywall).

How the T̓s̓id̓el̓del First Nation and the Tl'etinqox Government are Integrating Indigenous Practices into Forest Rehabilitation

In 2018, the T̓s̓id̓el̓del First Nation and the Tl'etinqox Government created Central Chilcotin Rehabilitation Ltd. (CCR) – a joint venture company whose work and values incorporates traditional wisdom through Indigenous practices. Although CCR's focus is to coordinate large-scale forestry programs and initiatives within the Nations' traditional territories, all work showcases how traditional wisdom through Indigenous practices can intersect with modern forestry practices. By prioritizing the restoration of connections to traditional lands, the incorporation of Indigenous ecological knowledge, the creation of cultural spaces, the inclusion of Indigenous-led decision-making, and building meaningful partnerships, CCR is not just revitalizing landscapes, but also honouring the rich heritage of Indigenous communities and holding space for healing intergenerational trauma. What is a Limited Licence and Who is it Designed for?

My last article in the winter 2024 edition of BC Forest Professional introduced FPBC's latest designation – the Affiliated Forest Professional (AFP.) This designation enables people with a wider range of educational backgrounds to register and practice professional forestry. The AFP is one of the tools FPBC created to align professionals to the scope of practice they provide while respecting the law under the Professional Governance Act. An AFP holder, as well as a Registered Forest Technologist (RFT), may also be eligible for a limited licence.

A limited licence is a licence granted by FPBC to an eligible registrant to practise in a specific area of a reserved practice. The licence may define a limited expansion of scope for an RFT, or it may define a single area of practice for an AFP holder (or other associate registrant) who is not authorized to engage in any other aspect of a reserved practice. Tackling Environmental Racism in Canada

After years of lobbying by advocates and affected communities, and multiple iterations, Canadian legislation aimed at addressing and preventing environmental racism has become law.

Bill C-226 – An Act respecting the development of a national strategy to assess, prevent and address environmental racism and to advance environmental justice – received royal assent on June 20 after a long journey through Parliament. It is Canada's first law focused on the longstanding practice of disproportionately situating polluting industries and environmental hazards near Indigenous, Black and other marginalized communities. Fines for Illegal Hunting and Fishing More Than Double in B.C.

Fines for illegal hunting and fishing in British Columbia are more than doubling as the province cracks down on offences against wildlife.

The Ministry of Forests says the new scale of fines effective Tuesday under the Wildlife Act ranges from $345 to $1,495, up from the current range of $115 to $575.

The biggest fines apply to people who hunt or possess big game out of season. The ministry says in a news release the new penalties "better reflect the serious nature" of wildlife offences and acknowledge the importance of wildlife to B.C. Read the BIV article.

BC Supreme Court Upholds Stay on Physician's Access to Information Requests

The Supreme Court of British Columbia upheld the Information and Privacy Commissioner's decision to stay all of a physician's access to information requests related to his Medical Services Plan billing issues, making the decision procedurally fair and reasonable. In Cimolai v British Columbia (Information and Privacy Commissioner), 2024 BCSC 948, the physician faced a 2017 audit by the Medical Services Commission (MSC), resulting in an order to repay a significant amount and a three-year suspension from billing MSP. Seeking information related to this audit, the physician filed numerous requests under the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (FIPPA), leading to 126 requests for review and 24 reconsideration requests to the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner (OIPC) between 2017 and 2022. Amendments to Cannabis Regulations Proposed by Health Canada

New changes to Canada's cannabis regulations have been proposed by Health Canada and are subject to consultation and request for comments until July 8, 2024. The amendments come amidst calls from industry and stakeholders to reduce the regulatory administrative burden associated with their participation in the cannabis market. The changes proposed include new requirements for licensing, personnel and physical security measures, production, packaging and labelling, record keeping and reporting. In 2018, Canada's Cannabis Act (the "Act") came into force to govern the production, advertising, distribution, sale, and possession of cannabis in Canada. The Cannabis Regulations (the "Regulations") created under the Act provide for specific rules in relation to these activities, including requirements regarding licences, packaging and labelling, and physical and personnel security requirements. There are also other related regulations and orders governing the cannabis market, including the Industrial Hemp Regulations, the Natural Health Products Regulations, and the Cannabis Exemption \(Food and Drugs Act\) Regulations. BC Merges Health-profession Colleges

British Columbia's government has amalgamated 11 health-professional colleges into two, setting the foundation for what it says is stronger oversight. Health Minister Adrian Dix says merging the colleges is part of the government's plan to ensure health professionals are regulated more consistently and robustly. The new College of Health and Care Professionals of BC will oversee roles including dietitians, occupational and physical therapists, optometrists and opticians, psychologists, and speech and hearing professionals. The College of Complementary Health Professionals of BC will regulate chiropractors, massage therapists, naturopathic physicians, acupuncturists and practitioners of traditional Chinese medicine. BC Court of Appeal Affirms Plaintiffs Can Bring Novel Claims for Duty of Good Faith Breaches in Employment Contexts

In the recent decision of British Columbia v Taylor, 2024 BCCA 44, the BC Court of Appeal found that the duty of good faith is a developing area of law in the employment context and courts should permit plaintiffs to bring novel claims in this area.

In this case the plaintiff, Ms. Taylor, claimed that she was wrongfully dismissed from her employment with the Province of British Columbia in 2017 and that the Province breached their duty of good faith in her employment and termination of her employment. Human Rights Complaint Proceeds to Hearing, Despite Signed Release

The BC Human Rights Tribunal (the "Tribunal") recently issued a decision in Fyffe v. University of British Columbia, 2024 BCHRT 88. In that case, the University had applied to the Tribunal to dismiss the complaint without a hearing on the ground that it would not further the purposes of the Human Rights Code (the "Code") to allow the complaint to proceed, as the complainant had signed a release agreement releasing the University from all claims related to the termination of her employment, including claims arising under the Code. The Tribunal denied the University's application and held that the complaint would proceed to a hearing where the issue of whether the release agreement barred the claim could be raised again by the University and decided after oral evidence. In applications to dismiss, the parties typically submit affidavit evidence in support of their positions and there is no oral testimony. Read the full article by [S. More than Words: An Employer's Conduct Can Invalidate a Termination Clause

Despite the fact that an employment contract contained enforceable termination language, the British Columbia Supreme Court recently found that an employee was entitled to common law reasonable notice and $25,000 in punitive damages as a result of the employer's repudiatory conduct towards the employee.

We have previously written on what happens when an employer does not follow the terms of a written employment contract and then attempts to rely on it later. Klyn v. Pentax Canada Inc., 2024 BCSC 372, released on March 3, 2024, is a reminder for employers wishing to rely on the termination arrangements in their employment contracts that the work is not necessarily finished once the paperwork has been signed. BC Court of Appeal Displaces Presumption of Common Law Reasonable Notice in Wrongful Dismissal Case

The BC Court of Appeal upheld the enforceability of a termination clause in an employment contract that adhered to the Canada Labour Code, thereby displacing the presumption of common law reasonable notice.

In Egan v. Harbour Air Seaplanes LLP, 2024 BCCA 222, Gerard Michael Egan challenged the dismissal of his wrongful termination lawsuit against Harbour Air Seaplanes LLP. Egan, who was terminated without cause in March 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic, argued that he was entitled to reasonable notice at common law. Pitfalls of Dismissing Employees for Unprofessional Use of Social Media

I will be commenting on a very interesting case that is, at its core, a case about free speech, but it also engages disciplining employees for opinions they express outside of work on social media. The case is Kim v International Triathlon Union, 2014 BCSC 2151, where the British Columbia Supreme Court found that an employee's termination for questionable posts on social media was unjust and breached her employment contract.

Background Facts

- Paula Kim was employed by the International Triathlon Union in the position of Senior Manager of Communications. At the time of her termination, she had worked two terms at ITU, between late 2006 and early 2009, and a second term from late 2010 until her termination.
- On November 20, 2012, ITU terminated her employment, without cause. On termination, ITU provided Ms. Kim with two weeks of her base salary in lieu of notice under the BC Employment Standards Act, plus an offer of a salary continuation until December 31, 2012, if she signed a release. She did not have a written employment agreement with ITU.

Canada Announces 30-Day Consultation on Measures to Address China's Trade Practices Related to Electric Vehicles

On July 2, 2024, Canada will initiate a 30-day consultation period on potential policy responses to China's rapid rise as the world's largest manufacturer of electric vehicles (EVs). Enhancing Crane Safety in British Columbia

In a significant move to enhance safety in the crane industry, WorkSafeBC has announced a comprehensive risk-reduction strategy aimed at improving crane safety across British Columbia. This initiative comes in response to the increasing number of cranes operating on complex, multi-employer worksites and a slew of recent incidents. The urgency of this strategy was amplified by four incidents earlier this year, including one fatal, and are also highlighted by the 2021 tower crane collapse in Kelowna, which claimed the lives of five workers. These events have spurred WorkSafeBC to undertake a thorough review of crane safety, informed by input from over 130 crane-sector stakeholders. PROPERTY, REAL ESTATE & CONSTRUCTION*Property, Real Estate & Construction News:*British Columbia Court of Appeal Clarifies Owner's Right to Pay Holdback into Court to Discharge Liens on Title

If an owner agrees to pay amounts owed by a contractor to its subcontractors to avoid lien claims being filed, how does this affect the owner's right to pay the holdback into court under section 23 of the Builders Lien Act, S.B.C. 1997, c. 45 (the Act) to discharge lien claims? The Court of Appeal in Pinnacle Living (Capstan Village) Lands Inc. v. Fairway Recycle Group Inc. has recently weighed in on this important question. Section 23 of the Act allows an owner to discharge lien claims from title by paying a prescribed holdback amount into court as security if the lien claims are filed by a class of lien claimants "other than a class of lien claimants engaged by the owner." Duty Calls: BCCA Considers Duty of Care Owed by Structural Consultants to Building Owners

Centurion Apartment Properties Limited Partnership v Sorenson Trilogy Ltd., 2024 BCCA 25

The British Columbia Court of Appeal (BCCA) recently held that structural consultants have a prima facie duty of care to the owner of a building to ensure that the building does not contain defects that pose a foreseeable danger to the health and safety of its occupants.

Background

In 2017, 113407 B.C. Ltd. retained DB Services of Victoria Inc. (DB) to design and construct an 11-storey residential apartment building in Langford, British Columbia (BC). DB Services then retained Sorenson Trilogy Engineering Ltd. (STE) to act as structural engineers on the project. The court noted that although STE was not competent to provide structural engineering services due to a lack of expertise for this size of building, they undertook to do so anyway.

Electronic Meetings and Proxies

Dear Tony:

Is it possible for owners in a strata corporation to determine how our general meetings are being held? Prior to the Covid era, we had in person meetings, we always struggled with a quorum, and one person always controlled the meetings with a fist of proxies. During the restrictions we held meetings electronically, our owners attending more than doubled, and very few proxies were ever issued. Now we are back at in person meetings because of our president, and he showed up at last week's meeting with 47 proxies. In a community of 120 units, this guaranteed he had the controlling votes and determined the outcome of decisions and council. Do owners have any say in the type of meeting we hold? – BDR, Surrey

Dear BDR:

The decision on the type of meeting is determined by the strata council and within the limitations of your bylaws and the Strata Property Act; however, there is an option where the owners by majority vote can direct the council, including the type of meeting being conducted. Twenty percent of the owners can petition for a special general meeting or add an agenda item at your next general meeting, to vote to direct council to conduct meetings electronically.

Holdback Liens Against Holdbacks Up the Construction Chain – Hi-Tide Shoring & Foundations (2012) Ltd. v Chandos Construction Ltd.

In the recent case of Hi-Tide Shoring & Foundation \(2012\) Ltd. v Chandos Construction Ltd., the British Columbia Supreme Court considered whether a sub-subcontractor on a construction project may claim a holdback lien against the holdbacks held up the construction chain or was limited to claiming against the holdback that relates to the sub-subcontractor's own contract. The Court said that subcontractors may claim against holdbacks retained at each level of the construction chain up to the holdback retained by the owner. However, when it comes time to determine how much the subcontractor is paid for that claim of lien, section 34 of the Builders Lien Act may limit the amount the lien claimants may recover through such claims. BC Looks to Change Building Code to Develop Single-stair Apartment Buildings

BC will look at changing its building code to allow small apartments to be built with a single stair, adding to its reputation as the province most willing to try new ideas to create more housing supply, though the move is also drawing safety-related concerns. Canada's building code, which provinces have generally gone along with, has required two staircases per apartment building since 1941. But BC's Ministry of Housing last week published a research report outlining the optimal conditions for single staircases. Read the BIV article.
